

James Garner For Big Red Soda - 18"x24" Latex On Wood 2009

James Bumgarner was paid $300 in 1957 to endorse Big Red soda. A movie studio in 1958 changed his name to James Garner without his permission. How would you like to have the place that you work give you a new last name? You wouldn't like it one bit!

Kitty-Keatsie (RIP) - 18"x18" Latex On Wood 2009

When I was in college I had a Canadian girlfriend named Tiffany who acquired a cat while we were dating. Eventually she moved back to Canada and left the cat with me. I liked the cat just fine but never really wanted a pet. I don't like changing litter boxes and I'm somewhat allergic. After having the cat for 15 years I decided one day to take the cat to a shelter. Everybody that knew me was astounded that I could just give up my cat like that. I might be cold hearted from television violence! Sometimes I miss my cat.

Larry Hagman - 18"x18" Latex On Wood 2009

I have made and sold more than 30 copies of this painting because J.R. Ewing was a man that people love to hate. Amy bought one before she was my girlfriend and when she came to my house to pick it up she decided to like me because I have an interesting house. Though she does not know that I spent time making my house interesting to her before she came to visit.

Macintosh Plus - 15"x13" Latex On Wood 2009

When the Macintosh Plus was introduced to the public in 1986, it carried a hefty price tag of $2,599. Apple founder Steve Jobs named the company after his aunt's cat, which was named Apples. He thought naming a computer Apples didn't sound right, so he dropped the "s". Good job, Jobs!

Miles Raymer - 19"x24" Latex On Wood 2009

There is a music critic in Chicago named Miles Raymer. He dated my sister and was a real jerk to her. He insists on wearing tank tops at all times and wouldn't return my email message when I asked if he could help me promote a Tommy Keene show. So I made a painting of a digital watch that spells "BOOBS" and named it after him because at 35 you can't fist fight people without a lawsuit happening.
