

MIT5 Altair 8800 - 16"x24" Latex On Wood 2009

Whoa, this is like, the first computer EVER. It didn't have a monitor or anything, you just flipped a bunch of switches and some lights came on. Bill Gates used one of these and got a tattoo of one on his arm on his 30th birthday. Nobody knows that but you and I.

My Girlfriend Loves A Dodge Omni - 13"x21" Latex On Wood 2009

Last month Amy & I were walking to the store to get coffee creamer and a Dodge Omni was parked on the street. "That's a nice looking car," Amy said. "Ewww, no way!" I replied.

My Mother Is So Gullible - 84"x36" Latex On Wood With Glaze 2008

When Barack Obama was running for president my mother called me on the telephone to explain to me that I shouldn't vote for him because she had received an email claiming that he was a Muslim. I explained to her that the email was a hoax and that she shouldn't believe everything she read in emails. "Even the pill advertisements?" she asked. "Even the pill advertisements," I answered.

Nighthawks: In The Bathroom - 36"x60" Latex On Canvas 2009

I've always wanted to enter a bathroom with many urinals and one person using one and then use the one exactly next to that person. I've never had the guts to though, when I've had the chance, which is seldom. So, I just made this painting of it. Actually, these guys are gay and that's cool with me because I'm open minded.

Ninety-Nine Nines - 18"x13" Latex On Wood 2009

Seriously, I painted the number 9 ninety-nine times. It really wasn't that bad actually. The title of this painting is a lot better than the painting itself.

Nunya Bees (Nun & Hare) - 13"x15" Latex On Wood 2009

I have already mentioned my girlfriend Amy and roommate Julia, I have another roommate named Steve, that is Julia's boyfriend. Steve & Julia are law students. When I am trying to get all up in their business, the common response is "NUNYA BEES" which is babble-short for "none of your business". Julia will try to say that she invented this phrase, but actually I did. She will then try to tell you that I often try to take credit for things that she invented, but she is a liar. Soon she will be a lawyer too, go figure! Irregardless, I was lying about her being a liar. Irregardless isn't a word.