

Don't Do This - 13"x24" Latex On Wood 2009

If you have a baby, don't put a chicken leg on its face so it cannot breathe. If you have a baby and a chicken leg, keep them apart from each other. If you just have a chicken leg, you should eat it.

Duck Going To Pepe's - 18"x18" Latex On Wood 2009

This is the logo of a restaurant in South Carolina called Drake's Duck-In. On the hat is usually written the word DRAKES. But not here in Norman, OK! Here this duck is on its way to Pepe Delgado's on Asp Ave. You would really have no way of telling this though, except for the title and what I am writing here. I could also tell you that this duck was at one time the actor Candy Clark but was then reincarnated into a duck. I could have even have taken the time to paint all of that but I didn't go to college for art, I went for English and dropped out after two years. Kent State University, four dead in O-hi-o.

Eddie Murray - 18"x18" Latex On Wood 2009

Eddie Murray was born in 1956 and was my favorite baseball player when I was a kid. When I was 6 I lived in San Diego with my aunt Peggy for 8 months and she dated a wealthy man who was good friends with Eddie Murray. So, Eddie would often come over for dinner. I remember that around this time I was in the habit of saying "Well, that's YOUR opinion!" to almost everything that everybody said. Peggy and Eddie were talking about the gas shortage (this was 1979) and Eddie said that Jimmy Carter's "Crisis Of Confidence" speech was "a bunch of baloney" and that is was hard for people to "make ends meet." It was then that I said, "Well, that's YOUR opinion!" to which Eddie answered, "Yes, it is." I also remember thinking that "making ends meet" meant a recipe for cheap meat, like if you were low on money you could but the end of meat and make it to eat.

Fantasy Sports - 36"x60" Latex On Canvas 2009

This painting is made in a line / hatch mark style somewhat reminiscent of the signage in a Barnes & Noble bookstore. It took a long time to make but I have time on my hands, so don't feel bad for me. This painting is about fantasy sports, but mostly only in my head. If you want for me to explain it to you, we'll have to do it over the phone. You're gonna get mad about it when we do.
